All vans registered in Belgium must pay an additional €1,500. This is because the Belgian government has changed some rules for the inspection (MOT). All new conversions now require a new COC from Belgium this costs €1,500 and takes a month to get, so when the conversion is complete and back in Belgium it will take about a month to receive the new COC. You must then carry out a new technical inspection, you will receive a new adapted pink form with this you must then go to your insurance company for a so-called new registration. Once you have received the new registration documents, you can have the final van inspection done your number plate stays the same.
